

Paper

Kirby, S., "Language Evolution without Natural Selection", Edinburgh Occasional Papers in Linguistics, April 1998.

WRT: 1.75 hours

General Instructions

Slide elements should be terse; where you think explanation for me is needed, of the sort you would provide orally in a talk, enclose what you write in parentheses.

You may borrow freely from illustrations that appear in the paper. Do not fight with slide making software or fret about not having such software. You may cut and paste or roughly trace material from the paper or provide your own rough sketches of what you have in mind.

If practicable, provide your slides two or three to the page.

Assignment

- Create about six key slides for this work, including a first and final slide and whatever technical material in between that you think is most essential.
- Supply a list of titles for the slides you would use in a 10-15 slide presentation, including the slides you actually prepare.
