

Misplaced or Dangling Modifiers

These sentences have misplaced or dangling modifiers. Fix them.

1. The manager explained the sales figures to the board members using a graph.
2. Due to its ability to cover a large area, some sports arenas use tensile structures as a method of construction.
3. With an IQ of only 52, the lawyer argued that his client should not receive the death penalty.
4. Many banks lent money to both companies and individuals without evaluating their repayment abilities when the economy was booming.
5. I plan to analyze the great disparity between the diagnoses of the problem and examine the underlying cultural factors that might lead to such disparities through researching journals.
6. Scientists have learned that greenhouse gasses are increasing far faster than they thought in recent years.

MIT OpenCourseWare
<http://ocw.mit.edu>

21G.228 / 21G.227 Advanced Workshop in Writing for Social Sciences and Architecture (ELS)
Spring 2007

For information about citing these materials or our Terms of Use, visit: <http://ocw.mit.edu/terms>.