

Prepare a Web page describing your semester project, and link it into your class page. The project should be something that you can make in a few weeks, drawing on as many of the semester's units as possible. It might be related to your thesis research; it could be something you've always wanted to do but never had the opportunity.

Describe (and illustrate if possible) what you're going to make, and identify the components that you will need to create.

The details of your project are sure to change as the semester progresses; the goal of this assignment is to decide what you want to do, but not necessarily how you will do it.
